SHOOTING MYSTERY

street and had occasion to visit that portion of the city very frequently. Cho Aujae suspected that the lady Alathela was still friendly with his rival. One day he followed her. He found the couple in Sing Low's store. Yee Man Young went at the discovery. Then the three of them went to Yee Man Young's Kukui street rooms, where there were refreshments and a wrestling match between the Korean gentlemen for the lady's favor. All this happened last Monday. They adjourned from Kukui street to Alewa.

Here Cho Aujae locked up every room below stairs and drove Yee Man Young and the woman upstairs, where he locked them in a room, threatening to kill them both there and then, and also to take his own life. Yee Man Young and Cho Aujae then had a desperate struggle. The latter, being the huskier brute, overcame the former.

Then Cho Aujae tried to kill himself by jumping through a window, but the woman and Yee Man Young caught hold of him and held him fast. A consultation was then held and Yee Man Young, weeping, said he would withdraw, and not dispute his rival's fortune.

Yee Man Young started to go away, declaring that he would kill himself for love, or lack of love. A thread was on his coat. Alathela plucked it from him. Cho Aujae misunderstood the motion, grew jealous and attacked the woman.

Cho Aujae asked where he could find Mr. Emmeluth's revolver. The lady refused to reveal its hiding place, whereupon Cho Aujae climbed out a window and got into another and secured a rusty revolver and a razor. The revolver refused to operate.

There was another parley, after which Yee Man Young went away, sobbing.

He went to a Korean hotel and secured a cap for a disguise, leaving his hat behind.

Later Yee Man Young partook of liquor to gain courage. About 7:30, with a revolver, he went to the selected place and watched and waited. He stood within fifty feet of the servants' quarters, where he had lived, watching for Cho Aujae.

A man came out and passed near a papaya tree. Yee Man Young thought it was his rival, Cho Aujae. He put his left hand over his eyes and with his right he fired several times. Then he turned the gun on himself and attempted suicide, but the weapon failed to explode. It was apparently empty. He ran away, then, cutting through to Liliha street. And, after all, he had shot the wrong man; he shot Chan Sun Dak, a Korean who had succeeded him as yard boy. Yee Man Young then hustled away to Ewa on a late train and pawned his pistol with a friend for $3. Now he has confessed all and will have to answer to a charge of assault with intent to kill.

One of the photographs in the possession of the police shows the woman in the case standing with her lover. Love letters of an ardent nature, which passed between the two, are exhibits. The scrap of paper forced from Yee Man Young's mouth forced him to confess and the one word Alathela brought out, under close investigation, other statements, going to make the story as above briefly told.

Very curious is the method of fishing followed by the Chinese in the Straits of Malacca.

The fisherman lets down from the side of the boat a screen of white canvas stretched on wood. The school of fish mistake this for some floating obstruction and try to leap over it, with the result that the fish jump into the boat and are thus captured. This method is employed by the Malays in their waters.
